Video Production: Disciplines and Techniques By James C Foust, Edward J Fink, Lynne S Gross

This popular book introduces readers to the operations underlying video production. It provides thorough coverage of the theory readers need to know, balancing complexity with practical how-to information about detailed subjects, and it does so in a concise, conversational style. The authors have incorporated the major changes that have occurred in recent years; further increased the emphasis on digital, non-linear video production; updated and expanded information on mobile technologies; and added more than 25 new or updated figures. The subtitle remains disciplines and techniques because focus of the book continues to be on the fact that students need those foundations in order to be successful in video production, no matter where they may end up. Its affordable, student-friendly price, companion website, and print book and ebook options add to this book's practical nature.

Editorial Review

Review

This book is one of the most comprehensive and up-to-date texts on the market for television production. . . . The authors give clear guidance on important 'big-picture' issues such as pre-production and clarity in terminology when directing. At the same time, this text gives 'fine point' focus on issues such as setting up a shot to provide a clear axis of action for the viewers. This is an excellent textbook, which I would strongly recommend for any university program. --Shawn R. Hughes, Lubbock Christian University

The authors have been diligent in updating this text for the ever-changing landscape of video production by adding topics such as solid state media to introductory chapters. . . . [The book] should be used in classes where concepts are executed off the page, and I think the authors pedagogical approach mirrors that goal. --Marie M. Elliott, Valdosta State University

I really like the introduction and production overview in Chapter 1. This critical section upon which all other information builds is brilliantly structured and complete. --David Reeder, Suffolk University
